

DAVID BARIONI NETO

David Barioni Neto was born in São Paulo, is 50 years old, and assumed the CEO position at TAM Airlines in November 2007. With more than 30 years of experience in aviation, he worked in technical and flight operations areas until occupying executive management positions. In 1979, he started his career at Vasp (Viação Aérea São Paulo), as the youngest co-pilot in the company history and also participated in the company administration staff, as General Instruction Manager, Head of Equipment and 737 aircraft inspector. In addition to be an airline pilot and Master International Pilot, he is a flight safety agent certified by Cenipa (Aeronautic Accident Investigation and Prevention Center), specialized in special cargoes and crisis management by IATA (International Air Transport Association). He is graduated in Business Administration, and is now attending classes in Aeronautic Sciences. He also participates in the Board of Advisors of Instituto Ayrton Senna and the Executive MBA Program of the University of Pittsburgh in South America. He is a member of COMn Presidentes, Fundação Dom Cabral – a group dedicated to discussions about innovation and strategy.